«Providence, (R.I.)» Heard that W.L.G. plans "writing a book" about Dr. W. E. Channing, which will show how much W. E. C. borrows from Abolitionist writers without giving them credit for the material. W. G. objects that it is hard to tell where a writer gets his ideas, sometimes the writer doesn't know himself, and anyway the writer "renders the public a service" by putting ideas in "a more lucid and attractive garb." Suggests publishing parallel passages from W. E. C.'s book and some Anti-Slavery writings and letting the public note the similarity. Tried to prove that the "inalienable rights" mentioned in the Declaration of Independence are "self-evident" in the essay [illegible]titled Human Rights in the Emancipator. Recommends F. To Mrs. Nicholson

«Honeoye, Ontario, N.Y.» A letter from the addressee to Lewis Tappan has been forwarded to the writer, so that he might answer her inquiries about American abolitionists. In explaining the divisions among these the writer refers to the parallel case of the Protestant Reformation. Alludes also to a proposal by Luther to observe Thursday as a sabbath. The American anti-slavery movement found American Christians already divided. Explains the power of slaveholders in America, the need of agitating among the people, and the rôle of the church as educator of the popular conscience. The British know little of the sacrific[illegible]o which American abolitionists are called. The opposition t[illegible]ti-slavery because of its alleged hostility to "divine institutions" turns som abolitionists against these institutions. The writer differs in many

No.6

To Messrs. Samuel May Jr., Francis Jackson, Robert Folger Wallcutt and the managers of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society.

[New York(City)] The writer claims that the Mess. A-S Soc'y. made no attempt to prove its assertions that his book contained false statements. Says he did not write as a partisan. Declares that most of the "Anti-Slavery labor of the country (political, ecclesiastical and moral) has been conducted outside of either of these National Societies..." Explains his relationship to William Harned. A member of the American & Foreign A-S Soc'y thinks the writer's book is unfair to his organization, and another m[illegible]r characterizes certain passages as "rank Garrisonism.[illegible]

«New York» Is flattered by the writer's recollection of their former acquaintance, when they met in company with Mr. and Mrs. (Joshua) Bates. While the writer utterly condemns the institution of slavery, in his view "the magnitude of the evil, in the vast numbers involved, has always presented itself to me as an insurmountable difficulty," and he considers it one of those abuses which will be cured "rather by the progress of general intelligence and a higher standard of character than by direct and forcible interference." The writer must therefore deny himself the pleasure of acting with the addressee.

To the honorable General Court. (Contemporary copy ?)

[Cambridge.] A memorandum of Indian children put forth into service to the English, being of those Indians that came in and submitted with John Sachem of Packachooge, with the names of the persons with whom they were placed, and the names and age of the children and the names of their relations and the places they did belong to. The terms and conditions upon which they are to serve is to be ordered by the General Court, who are to provide that the children be religiously educated and taught to read English.

There follows a list of thirty-two Indian children put out to service with twenty-three persons. The document is probably a contemporary co[illegible] the handwriting does not resemble Daniel Gookin's.
